SAIGON, Aug. 20 (AP).—North Vietnam has scored its biggest gain since May 1, selzing the strategic Que Son Valley and opening up to attack a populous 50-mile stretch of Highway 1 from Danang southward, field reports said today. Danang is South Vietnam's second largest city.

The North Vietnamese capture of Que Son was significant in that it marked the first time in the entire war that the valley had fallen.

The battle for the valley, 40 miles south of Danang, cost the South Victnamese heavy losses in

The Saigon command made no mention of the U.S. supplied equipment that was abandoned. Field reports said that 21 arti!lery pieces, both 105-mm and 155sonnel carriers and six tanks Were left behind.

Other Demands

"The North Vietnamese consistently have used those prisoners as political hostages," Mr. Rogers said. "And if they succeeded in the purposes that they have had in mind, why wouldn't they bold the prisoners and then demand other action on our part? They might demand that we

A passenger ran into the terminal to report the incident and an airline official ran to the

India has maintained that Ugandan Asians holding British passports are Britain's problem, while the approximately 3,500 Asians holding Indian passports are free to reenter India. Those with British passports are barred from returning to India. India will probably have to reappraise its policies in view of the move to expel Asians with Ugandan citizenship. For years the Indian government has been telling its people abroad to take out local citizen-

The 24-game match now stands at 9 1/2 for Fischer to 6 1/2 for Spaseky.

A crowd of 2,800 spectators watched the long game, which ended in a draw as the seconds ticked away on the last minute of regulation time for Fischer. The American stared at the board, then offered his hand to

The game appeared headed for a certain draw nearly 30 moves earlier, and Spassky's four Russian grand-master seconds had their coats on for more than an hour while the champion and challenger moved the same pieces back and forth.

"What a crazy game," one chess expert said in the corridor after the 56th and 57th moves. "Why don't they stop this? Why doesn't one of them offer a draw?"

For the last 12 moves the post tions remained almost unchanged Spassky ended the game with a rook and two pawns against Fischer's rook and ione pawn. "It was a great game up to the 34th move, then they could have stopped," Yugoslav grand master Svetozar Gligoric said,

Fischer showed up 11 minutes late and played his favorite king pawn opening. The challenger carried an official protest and request to move the game to a back room but never presented it. Three times he personally complained about the noise to arbiter Lothar Schmid during the course of the game.

Fischer Protests Noise Schmid said after the game that Pischer "first complained about the coughing and then twice he came up and asked me to move the game to a private room because of the noise.

As the delegates joined the caucuses and receptions jamming the weekend calendar, compromises were being discussed on tha dispute over apportionment of delegates for the 1976 convention that provoked a battle last week between Southern and Western conservatives and the more progressive Republicans of the blg industrial states.

Floor-Fight Threat

The progressives were threatening a convention floor fight if their demands for increased representation and more diverse delegates are not met, but prospects of a compromise in the Convention Rules Committee were reported improving.

Officials have said that some prominent pro-Nixon Democrats may make surprise appearances on the program, and Mr. Mac-Gregor hinted yesterday that one of them may be John B. Connaily, formerly governor of Texas and more recently Treasury secretary, who now heads the National Democrats for Nixon drive.

Vietnam May Be Cited There have also been hints that Mr. Nixon may use his acceptance speech to announce any developments in the Vietnam peace talks achieved by his national security adviser, Henry Kissinger, with whom he was conferring yesterday at Camp David, the presidential retreat in Maryland.

Whether or not he has any breakthrough to announce, the President's political position is incomparably stronger than it was four years ago, when he was nominated for the presidency in this city. # U.K. Embassy Stormed by Libyan Crowd

BEIRUT, Aug. 20 (UPI) -Libyan demonstrators vesterday attacked the British Embassy in Tripoli, their nation's capital, tearing down the flag, breaking windows, wrecking furniture and destroying the embassy plaque, Exppt's Middle East News Agency said.

Today, Libys rejected Britain's formal protest against the attack, the news agency reported. The demonstrators were pro-testing Britain's decision to deny asylum to two Moroccan officers who fled to Girraltar following last Wednesday's abortive attempt on the life of King Hassan II of Moroco. The officers, and three non-commissioned, officers who said they were not involved in the plot, flew to Gibraltar in a helicopter but the two fugitives were denied asylum by Britain. However, the Iraqi news agency, also reporting from Tripoli, said the demonstrators were opposed by "elements from inside the embassy, who hurled tear-gas canisters to disperse the demonstrators." Defense To Be Probed The crowd later marched to Libya's government building, demanding the closing of the embassy, the agency said. It reported that the premier, Maj. Abdel Salam Jallond, came out to talk to them and promised to launch an investigation into the "measures taken by the embassy against the demonstrators." The attack came 48 hours after the British ambassador in Tripoli was called in by Foreign Minister Mansour Khakmis, who protested London's decision. The demonstration coincided with attacks on Britain in Libya's state-controlled

Scientists Think Mosquitoes May Spread Serum Hepatitis

By Lawrence K. Altman NEW YORK, Aug. 20 (NYT) --Scientists have discovered in mosquitoes evidence of the virus that causes serum hepatitis, thus strengthening a theory that many cases of the common liver disease can be spread by mosquitoes and possibly other insects.

Although the discovery does not prove conclusively that mosquitoes can infect humans with serum hepatitis, the researchers suggest that insects could be a major source of infection in Africa and other transcolusions. other tropical areas.

The scientists enspect that such insect spread would be less im-portant in the United States and other countries in more temperate climates where blood transfosions and injections with contaminated needles are considered the prime sources of serum hepatitis.

The new evidence was found in mosquitoes collected in East and West Africa by two teams of researchers who have reported their findings in recent issues of two British journals, Nature and Lancet. Those mosmitpes collected in the forests and swamps of East Africa were shipped in dry ice and tested in New York.

Evidence in Tropics. For unknown reasons, evidence of the serum hepatitis virus can be found up to 100 times more frequently in people living in the tropics than those residing in more temperate climates. This mystery has led to a debate about the role of genetics in making tropical natives more suscep-tible to serum hepatitis, which is also called hepatitis B. In tropical Africa, 10 percent of the native population shows evidence in the blood of hepath. tis B. The evidence comes from a test that goes by any of three names—Australia antigen, hepatitis-associated antigen or hepatitis B antigen. An antigen is any foreign protein that can simulate the body to produce antibodies, the biological barriers of immunologic defense. Australia antigen is considered a specific test-for hepatitis B. But scientists are uncertain whether this antigen and the virus are identical. Hepatitis, which means inflam-mation of the liver, can be caused by a variety of toxins, drugs and infectious agents such as virtues. Doctors have known about one type, hepatitis, since the last century, although they have given it other names.

Search Handicapped Although scientists had suspected that insects spread serum hepalitis, they had been handicapped in such research until discovery of the Australia antigen test in the last decade. The test appropriation by only patients who are sick with

ILWU Agrees On Merger Plan With Teamsters

:WASHINGTON, Aug. 20 (WP). -Leaders of the small but power-ful West Coast longshoremen's union have reached agreement on "proposal of merger" with the Teamsters, the largest union in the country.

.The plan was announced in San Francisco by Harry Bridges, president of the 15,000-member International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, in his column in the union's newspaper, published Friday.

The Teamsters, with 2.1 million members, are also in the process of merging with the Brewery and Distillery Workers.

Mr. Bridges's ILWU, with its capacity to shut down the West Coast docks, has more power than its numbers would suggest. An ILWU strike closed down the nation's Pacific ports for 134 days over the last half of last year and the first month of this, and nearly provoked Congress to pass a bill setting up strike-stopping compulsory arbitration for labor disputes in the transportation

The merger would have the effect of eliminating what has become one of the major labor issues on the docks: Who has tha right to load and unload cargoes in containers, the longshoremen, or the warehousemen who belong to the Teamsters.

It was reported in Januaryand both parties swiftly deniedthat the Teamsters and West Coast longshoremen had signed a letter of intent to merge, which helped in the settlement shortly afterward of the West Coast dock

The Contrast

Nearly every report from Miami poses the contrast between the Democratic National Convention and its Republican opposite number. The Republicans, we are told, are older, disproportionately masculine and white, and include far more office-holders of various sorts than the Democrats. They comprise, in effect, the elemente which dominated both party conventions until the shock of Chicago moved the Democrats to drastic changes.

Doubtless the Republicans are not displeased with the contrast. For they view the forthcoming campaign as one between "moderate goals historically sought by both major partles and far-out goals of the far left." as their draft platform puts it. And they claim that they are resisting the quota system employed by the Democrats in choosing convention delegations in favor of an "open choice"-one that neither bars the young, the women and the minorities, nor gives them an absolute title to a certain proportion of the seats.

But while they emphasize—and, as political language usually does, over-emphasizethe differences between their program and that of Senator McGovern, they apparently are being careful not to push their own party too fer toward the conservatives. Their labor plank is moderate; their tax plank is broad enough to accommodate a substantial number of Americans. In other words, the Republicans are repeating, in reverse, the Democratic strategy of 1964. Then President Johnson seized as much political territory to the left of Senator Goldwater as possible (and the Republicans in that year left Today, President Nixon is appropriating the him.

broad areas to the right of Senator Mc-Govern's position. And, if the opinion polls are correct, he is meeting an encouraging response.

The danger in any strategy of this kind is that, while it may win a widely based consensus, it can embitter the minority. That did not happen after the 1964 elections; the conservatives are not markedly more conservative, or more numerous today. But that may perhaps be explained by the fact that the conservatives won at leest a partial victory in electing Mr. Nixon four years leter. That he disappointed many of them by his approaches to Peking and Moscow, and especially by the Keynesian economics of his later period, has been largely compensated for by the rise of a new populism among the Democrats and its triumph in the nomination of Mr. McGovern.

There is, in other words, no reason to assume that the mollification of the conservatives after 1964 will be matched by a similar reaction among radicals after 1972. If this campaign, like the composition of the Republican National Convention, continues to give youth and the minorities a sense of alienation, the residue of bitterness could be Much will depend on events, on practical accomplishment, and while a president in office can help shape events, he is also their prisoner—as President Johnson was to discover within a few years of his massive triumph at the polls. But words as well as events can alter political destinles, so the Republicans must beware of sharpening, too definitively, their differences, not with a great deal of such territory unoccupied). Senator McGovern but with those who follow

Henry Kissinger's consultation in Saigon and the return to Hanel of North Vietnam's chief Paris negotiator. Le Duc Tho, suggest that a moment of truth is approaching in the long quest for peace in Indochina. After three secret Kissinger-Tho meetings in six weeks, both sides are reviewing the bidding in preparation for the final round of settlement talks before the American election.

Both Washington and Hanol are under maximum pressure to reach some agreement by October. President Nixon would we come a cease-fire before American voters go to the polls. Hanol knows that, if he stays in the White House, American peace terms and militery action are more likely to stiffen than ease after Election Day. Meanwhile, the two sides are compelled to continue talking both to avoid missing the opportunity October may bring and to be able to blame the other if the outcome is failure. But the fact of talks is less important than whether Washington and Hanoi are talking to the point.

The point is political—Vietnamese politics, not American, President Nixon's May 8 proposals for a military settlement-withdrawai of all American troops in return for release of prisoners of war and an all-Indochina ccasc-fire-have been rejected by the Communists. They insist that an agreement without a "political element" is unacceptable. While that insistence is not likely to change, it is also wholly improbable that the complex political solution proposed by Hanol coold be negotiated in the few weeks before November, even if Washington were prepared to go that route. Unless a simpler first step can be devised, agreement in October already is out the window.

In the past the Communists have insisted that a cease-fire and release of prisoners must wait until a three-party coalition government is formed, made up of elements of the Salgon government, the Viet Cong and neutralist groups. They now say they would negotiate the composition of such a coalition with a new Salgon government rather than the United States, and that Washington's political responsibility could end once President Thieu resigned and was replaced by a regime more congenial to Hanoi.

It is unclear, however, whether this new two-stage proposal means that American prisoners of war would be released and a cease-fire declared prior to negotiation of a coalition government. Nor have the Communists, up to the last Kissinger-Tho meeting at least, been willing to indicate whom in Saigon they would consider acceptable as negotiating partners.

If these questions could be answered reasonably, a formula for an October agreement is conceivable. At a minimum, the political element would have to comprise a broadening of the Saigon government, the opening of talks with the Viet Cong and third groups on a coalition and a pledge by President Thieu to resign when agreement is reached, rather than five months later. The military element then could be an immediate cease-fire, which would halt the bombing of North Vletnam, and the release of American prisoners in parallel with the withdrawal of all remaining American troops.

With flexibility in Hanoi and Saigon, such a formula to transfer the struggle in Vietnam from the battlefield to the conference table by November is clearly feasible. Moscow and Peking, which have made their peace with President Nixon, undoubtedly favor it. But Hanol remains a cipher, And in Saigon, President Thieu has called publicly for the bombing to go on-a position fortified perhaps by President Nixon's February pledge that "any future proposals we make will be joint proposals of the government of South Vietnam and the government of the United States."

As long as that implied veto is left in President Thieu's hands, chances for a negotiated settlement either in October or later will remain small. Another discouraging, but we hope not totally prohibitive, impediment to Mr. Kissinger's efforts to reach an accommodation is the hard line on Communist participation in a new Saigon government that is set forth in the White House-drafted Republican platform.

Amin's Economic Policy

Although Uganda's Gen. Idi Amin is not burdened by any profound economic insights. he must be aware that his country's economy was ailing when he took power in January, 1971, and that he has not only not haited its economic decilne but has, in fact, accelerated it. It is probably a mistake to regard Amin's latest moves against Uganda's Asians as racism. There is every indication that he is actually pursuing a kind of economic policy the consequences of which he is himself incapable of comprehending. Ultimately, he will scare off the Asian big businessmen, thanks to whom Uganda has become East Africa's largest sugar producer, And Amin has now declared that the expulsion of Asians will also affect an estimated 5.000 professional people, such as engineers, teachers, doctors, etc. Amin may be little concerned right now that the loss of these people may create precarious conditions in many sectors. It remains to be seen what he will do next. One option is always open to him; When the going gets really rough, he can blame "imperialist con-

Dublin Festival

Thomas Quinn Curtiss gives much-deserved praise to the Dublin Theater Festival while reporting that financial troubles threaten to darken a truly original theater showcase for Irish and foreign playwrights, actors and directors. That could, as Mr. Curtiss persuasively points out. strike a blow at Ireland's national traditions and international prestige. Also, this festival, like most meeting places of the mind and the heart, fulfills a function which every civilized nation owes to its people, namely, to employ its own and foreign artists in theater, music, dance, folklore, the visual arts, etc.-as a bridge to bring in outsiders who might otherwise never hear or think of Dublin as a crossroads of the arts.

I wonder how many of us realize that (1) a festival makes a country put its best foot forward and keep it there long after the festival is over; (2) every time a representative international festival is born, "the defenses of Peace" are strengthened everywhere and in this way we serve Unesco's primary purpose: (3) each time a festival dies somewhere in the world, whatever the reason, there is a rip in the universal fabric we cell Civilization

The loss of the Dublin Theater Festival would cause this kind of tear and be deeply felt, even resented, at a time when too many nations, big eod small, are sniping and striking at one another's innocent bystanders. They're familiar faces as familiar as any in American lifebut in their new roles the Republicans are hoping they'll sour to previously unattained ratingsespecially on Nov. 7.

The star of the show, who's borne many nicknames over the years, will be billed at the Republican Convention spectacle as "Knowledgeable Dick Nixon." His co-star, whose debut came four years ago as "Spiro Who?", is back this time playing the part of "Able Ted Agnew."

A cast of thousands has been essembled here for the threenight special, being carried by all the networks. The dislogue, carefully done by the best writers in the White House stable, is lengthy-but the essential message boils down to seven short words: Dick and Ted can do the

The basic notion the Republicans want to convey to the country is that they are the new professionals in government, far more reliable than George Mc-Govern and the "smateurs" who paraded across the television screen in last month's late-night Miami Beach production.

Bistoric Shift

If they can sell this notion, it will represent a historic shift in the public perception of the two parties. For more years than most people can remember, the Democrats have been the party of government in America—the party of the political profes-sionals—while the Republicans have been the amateurs and nutsiders, clamoring for a chance to try their hands at the reins.

Only once in the last 40 years have the Republicans been abia to elect a professional politician as President, and that man, Richard Nixon, squeaked in by the narrowest of margins in 1968.

Now, the Republicans believe. the "amateurish" performance of McGovern and his people gives them an opportunity, not just to win re-election by a far more comfortable fashion, but to establish a new image for themselves as the party of competence and governmental know-how,

Unlike the Democrats, who emplusized that most of their delegates were political novices and who paraded a set of unknowns across the podium, the Republican convention is planned almost proudly as a showcase for officeholders. Two-thirds of the Republican governors, half the senators, a fourth of the representatives and more than a score of mayors are included among the delegates-a far higher proportion than in the Democratic convention-and many of them have been given prominent places on the program.

right, are joining in the fun. Mr. Nixon has outmaneuvered and outstayed them all. It is 20 years since he accepted the vicepresidential nomination of his party, and now, on the verge of his 60th birthday, he will accept its presidential nomination for the third time, looking more fit and seeming more sergne and happy than ever before. . :

Serenity and happiness have never been his most intimate companions. Even now, at the pinnacle of his power something holds him back from that plain speaking and personal trust that bind a good political partnership together. But at least here in Miami Beach, and at last after all these years, he will finally get not only the nomination but the affection of his party.

This is perhaps the most interesting aspect of this particular convention. The ideological gap between Mr. Nixon and most ef the Republican delegates here is probably greater today than it was in 1952 when he was picked. as vice-president because he was a symbol af the growing power of youth, California and antinmunism.

The New Nixon

He has obviously changed more on both foreign and domestic policy than the Republicans here on the floor. Only 5 percent of the GOP delegates are willing to tell the pollsters that they are now "liberal," but almost all of them accept—or prefer not to think about—Mr. Nixon's spectacular switch to wage and price controls, record peacetime budget deficits, guaranteed annual wages for the poor at home and accommodations with the Communists sbroad.

Nevertheless, politics is the art of seizing and holding political power, and Mr. Nixon is very good at it. The conservativa Republicans may not like to see him succeed by adopting policies they fought against in the Forties and Fiftles and he used to win the vice-presidency 20 years ago, but nobody admires success more than the Republican conservatives.

Obviously, Richard Nixon has achieved political success. He has survived while all the others who were around when he first came to Washington as a minor official in Franklin Roosevelt's Office of Price Administration have died.

Even Harry Truman out there in Independence, Mo., and Lyndon Johnson, more worried about his health down there in Texas than is generally realized, not to mention Mr. Nixon's contemporaries in the House and Senate in the Forties and early Fifties, respect his endurance and political skill. So it is no wonder that the delegates here are more enthusiastic about him than at any time since he came into national politics,

Holding the Center

By expturing the center of the American political struggle, which the Democrats held for so long and Sen McGovern gave up in a fit of absentmindedness, Mr. Nixon has proved he was an astute and maybe even a great politician. The question now is whether he will be a great Presi-

ROME Aug 20 (NYT) -The Roms police arrested two men yesterday the bearers of an In-dian and of a Jordanian pass-port, who they believe plotted to bomb an Israeli jetliner that was carrying 148 passengers and crew to Tel Aviv on Wednesday. They were charged today with attempted multiple homicide. If con-victed, they could be sentenced to 15 years in preson.

The men were spotted between the fashionable Via Veneto and the central railroad station by two municipal guards who recon-nized them from photographs, that had been transmitted to the Italian security and intelligence services and to the international police during the last few days. The photographs had been taken by two 18-year-old British girls. Ruth Wattin and Audrey Walton, whom the two men had dated here for a week. The girls were persuaded by the men to board the Israeli aircraft bere on. Wednesday, bringing along a parting gift that the police afterward said contained a time bomb. Secretary of State William P.

The meeting at the State Department, which was attended by a ranking White House official, came in the wake of administra-tion concern over the anger in American Jewish circles about the impact that the new fees—ranging from $5,000 to $25,000, depending on the emigrant's level of education-may have on the ability of Soviet Jews to emigrate.

The Palestinian organization known as the Black September Group had claimed responsibility for those two attempts.

When the police questioned the two men yesterday about their trip to Venice and their return to Rome they answered: "We felt more secure here."

Miss Watkin and Miss Walton were brought before a woman magistrate again yesterday for examination, but nothing was disclosed about the proceeding.

A Rome newspaper that in-terviewed the girls Friday quoted them as saying that the men must have engineered the attempt. They said they had seen one of the two taking the cassete player out to bring it to a friend the morning of the sabotage. They also reportedly said that the two men had purchased a voltmeter, a screwdriver and a pair

Oil Companies See Progress In Talks With Arab Countries

BEIRUT, Aug. 20 (UPI)— Western oil companies and Arah producing nations have realized "great, progress" in negotiating the states demands for more participation in the industry, oil sources said tonight.

A full agreement between the two sides may be reached later this week, the sources said. "The companies have come to realize that we are serious in implementing the principle of participation," Ahmed Zaki Yaman, the Saudi Arabian oil minister, said.

Mr. Yamani who is leading the Arab side in the talks, was speaking to newsmen after a two-hour session with the company representatives.

Arthur Palmer, spokesman for the companies, said the twn sides will meet again at 6 p.m. tomorrow. He refused to discuss the progress of the negotiations.

The talks started yesterday in a mountaintop hotel bere, with Saudi Arabia, Iraq, Kuwait, Abu Dhabi and Qetar on one side and representatives of Standard Oil, New Jersey, Standard Oil of California, Texaco, Mobil, British Petroleum, Shell and CPP of France on the other. The companies have agreed in principle to Arab demands for 20 percent participation, but the two sides are in dispute over

The sources said company representatives submitted proposals to the producing nations aimed at averting a showdown over the states' demands.

The offer, details of which are not known, apparently accounted for the breakthrough in the negotiations, the sources sald.

If agreement is reached, Mr. Yamani said, each of the countries involved in the negotiations will pursue the talks separately with the companies.

MIAMI BEACH (NYT).-A special air of unreality hung over one of the most unreal of American cities all last week. Signs proclaimed that a national political convention was to be held here. The party is not assembling to choose new leaders, much less to debate any such choice. The old leaders, Richard Nixon and Spiro Agnew, will do very nicely, thank you. Satisfaction with the winning team of 1968 blanketed Miami Beach as heavily as the mid-August humidity.

No Suspense

True, two Republican Congress men of some ambition, Paul (Pete) McCloskey of California and John Ashbrook of Ohio, checked into town early, but they seemed very nearly as obscure now as eight months earlier when they tried to challenge the President in the primaries, from the left and right respectively, to no real effect.

The ebsence of suspense in the main function of the convention -to pick the national ticket-is the curse of the one-term in-cumbent President, Unless he is prepared to dump his running mate, as Dwight Eisenhower considered doing once and Franklin Roosevelt actually did twice, he faces a convention that is little more than an elaborate, overstaged rally, hard to rouse to enthusiasm, much less excitement.

The Democratic meeting in the same hall six weeks ago was chaotic ummanaged and seemincly endless, but it was alive. So were the Republican conventions of 1952 and 1964 when the intra-party competition was flerce. But for Richard Nixon and his

But Ben J. Clayburgh of North Dakota charged that the liberal alternative plan was "an effort to stack the deck against rural America." The only startling moment of the convention may be in the BONN (NYT).—West Germany faces an extraordinary federal election in late autumn that will probably be decided by only a handful of the 40 million voters, so narrow is the margin between the antagonists.

A poll has indicated that if the election were held now, the government would get 50 percent of the vote to 48 percent for the opposition

The Social Democrats are hoping that the political slack Mr. Schiller left will be taken up by his popular successor as the cabinet's "superminister," Helmut Schmidt, who is considered a consummate politician.

But this still leaves Mr. Brandt the public image of a man who lost his footing while keeping his head last spring when, at the cost of his governmental majority, he rammed through parliamentary ratification of the treaties of his controversial Eastern policy of improved relations with the Soviet Union and

Both qualities are found in J. Robert Schaetzel, U.S. ambassador to the EEC for the past six years, who is ending a State Department career which began in 1945,

In a city where shuffling of diplomatic posts is a common-place, a sad sense of occasion attends his departure. This reflects not merely a personal liking among Eurocrats for his droll yet trenchant approach to common problems, but apprehension about losing his pro-European voice at a time when the Atlantic dialogue suffers from strain and uncertainty.

Mr. Schaetzel commends the sentiment that "anyone who thinks he knows what is going on could not have been paying attention," so he avoids definitive statements about the unesse between America and the Common Market. The diplomatic crosstire in the past two years which has involved monetary, trade and eco-nomic matters testifies to what Mr. Schaetzel sees as a mutual insensitivity between the United States and the Six Increasingly, both sides have been operating under the pressure of domestic circumstances and those advocates of the partnership concept across the Atlantic, he says, have fallen

This candid perception is akin to the realization that the emperor was wearing no clothes, but Mr. Schaetzel has found it uphill work, especially under the Nixon administration, to convince American opinion of it.

The myth persists, too, that Europe is protectionist and explains why the United States now takes some 40 percent of Japanese exports while Europe receives only percent as a result of the tariff wall the REC has built.

Mr. Schnetzel insists these assumptions are generally false, or at least not specifically accurate: So far as trade policy is concerned, the KEC is no more protectionist than the United States. Documents Declassified Requests for Army records on death were rejused at the time on the ground that they were classified "secret," However, persistent efforts by Samuel J. Archibald, the director of the Washington office of the Freedom of Information Center at the University of Missouri, have resulted in declassification of the documents after nearly 27 years.

About 50 pages of official reports make it clear that Capt. Birch, whose record had been very good, provoked a group of Chinese Communist soldiers into killing him and almost killing his Chinese adjutant, a Lt. Tung. by being demanding, threatening and arrogant. The reports go into great detail about the mission Capt. Birch was leading at the time of his death. Nine days after Japan's sur-render, Capt. Birch was assign-ed to lead a small group of that he had provoked his own death, but the government re-fused to make public an official version. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, commander of U.S. forces in China, was also chief of staff to Gen. Chiang, and the United States had an observer group at Communist headquarters in Yenan. The two Chinese forces were not cooperating but, nevertheless, both were supposed to know the location of American missions. In this case they did not because the area was cupied by the Japanese.

Warned of Danger

The Birch group found the Japanese cooperative on the first day of the mission, but was warned of danger if it proceeded into the Communist area. Despite the warning, Capt. Birch led his group forward, and they encountered some Communist troops. Capt. Birch, who was fluent in Chinese, was allowed to pass, but according to the rec-ords Lt. Tung noticed that Capt. Birch's attitude was "a little severe." He told Capt. Birch he gerous," but the captain replied: "Never mind. I want to see how the Communists treat Americans. I don't mind if they kill ma, for America will then stop the Communist movement with atomic bombs."

Lieutenant Shot A short distance farther, the leader of about 20 armed Communists ordered his men to load their guns and disarm Capt. Birch. Lt. Tung tried to intervene again, but was shot. He lost consciousness after bearing another shot and hearing Capt. Birch say he was hit in the leg and could not walk. A third shot apparently killed Capt. Birch, and he was beyoneted as well. Both men were left for dead, but Lt. Tung was rescued and returned to an American base, where he was interrogated at length. He lost an eye and a leg.

The others in the Birch group were detained nearly two months. They reported later that they were treated fairly well. Three of the Americans made out a

With that conclusion, however, was the following statement; "Since the presence of Birch party in the area had not been announced to the Commu-nists, Nationalists or the Yenan Observer Group ... and because the Communists were still in battle action, it was entirely proper for them to hold Birch and Tong until satisfied that they were friendly groups. "Further, in view of Birch's attitude and actions, the Com-

The report also said, "From Lt. Tung's testimony, it seems clear that Birch was in no mood to treat with the Communists and that his actions toward them were balligerent and contempta-

Gen. Wedemsyer wrote Aug. 31 to Mao Tse-tung about the inci-dent, expressing gratitude fur past cooperation and asking for a prompt investigation and report. A reply from Yenan asserted that Capt. Birch and Lt. Tung had approached from the enemy's direction, had cursed the Com-munists who challenged them, and were shot in self-defense.

Wedemeyer's Role

About 10 years later, Gen-Wedemeyer wrote an article for Robert Welch's new journal, One Man's Opinion, and soon was listed on its editorial advisory committee. In 1958, Mr. Welch secretly organized the John Birch Society and changed the name of his magazine to American Opinion. Gen. Wederneyer remained as an adviser through the October issue of 1961, several months after the rightist organization became public. But a few weeks later he told Newsweek magazine that he had left hind the American strategic arm and makes a miserable contribution to its own protection. Mr. Schaetzel observes that the United States has 310,000 men in Europe contrasting with its allies' almost three million under arms. The cost of maintaining an American presence here is $3 billion a year whereas Europe spends an annual $26 billion.

But incomprehensions work just as effectively in the other direction—that America is becoming selfish and isolationist, for instance. The concept of the American selling price on the former's and the increasing stridency ir the presidential campaign over defense commitments have not belped, according to Mr. Schaetzel, to assuage European fear about both these.

There is also the belief that the American balance-of-pay ments difficulties have been a: impetus to U.S. multi-nationals to "buy up" Europe. In fact, he says, there is no relationship be-tween the trade deficit and funds. used by U.S. companies to purchase foreign industry. He cites a recent survey of American sub-sidiaries in France which found they paid proportionately more taxes, and contributed more to exports than French-owned com-panies. "U.S. firms operating in. Europe have a much stronger; relationship with European balance-of-payments surpluses than with American deficits," he con-

Mr. Schaetzel attributes there perversity but rather "the ele-ment of sheer complexity" this period of inevitable change is bringing. He sees an increasing impotence by great powers to influence events—indicating the abrupt ouster of Russians from Egypt and Britain's inability to prevent the "insane" policy against the Ugandan Asians that General Amin is pursuing.

"All the old reference points are changing," he says, "and it's true of Europe no less than elsewhere that the public senses this confusion and lack of direction. I think there is a feeling of real bafflement with the United States which should not be condemned, but whose causes we ought to understand."

However, this does not excuse the "inelegant" way the Com-mon Market handled trade negotiations with the United States earlier this year, even though he thinks the administration has put an unrealistic schedule on the proposed round of GATT talks next year. To prevent a repetition of similar bad grace, Mr. Schaetzel thinks U.S.-European relations should be the subject of the closest scrutiny at this fall's Paris summit of the Common Market and four acceding nations.

A Special Case

"It is not for me to procume to tell this summit what its priorities should be. This is a strictly European matter, Nonetheless, if the summit subsumes in its review of links with third countries—Kenya, say, or Madagascar the special consideration it should give to relations with America, this could be unhelpful and even harmful."

It is fortunate that though Mr. Schaetzel will soon have to take peripheral role in discussions about the Atlantic relationship, he will not be lost to it altogether. There is the book, and commissioned articles to write in the first months of his "retirement," and after that possibly a university job. He's 55 and still has much

The immediate prospect is three whole weeks of protocol farewells to which this Californian is not looking forward. With all modesty he would prefer just to slip away. Will he revisit Europe? "I might come back from time to time—to eat."

Laggard N.Y. Market Groups Start to 'Bloom' As Interest Broadens Beyond Glamour Issues

By Vertanig G. Vartan

NEW YORK, Aug. 20 (NYT) .-Some laggard market groups in the New York Stock Exchange finally began to bloom last week as institutions and other investors broadened their market interest beyond glamour stocks.

An interest in oil issues in the paled, blue-chip category and ag-ressive bidding for farm-equip-ment stocks in the cyclical group underscored what may presage an important change in market leadership. This came as a welcome development to many Street analysts, who maintain that buying power must fan ont from growth stocks with lefty price-earnings ratios into more mundane areas that also hold promise, if the general market is

By Alan Truscott

An English player who held the South cards on the diagramed deal was overheard bemoaning his fate: "I was in a grand slam with a 95 percent chance," he announced indignantly, "and it went down." Harry Ingram, the 84-rear-old British expert who is the only survivor of the dramatic 1934 Schwab Cup match between England and the United States, promptly asked to see the hand. As he expected, the defeat was the declarer's fault.

West led the heart jack, and South thought he would wrap it up quickly. He won with the heart ace, cashed the diamond acc, and led to the diamond king, expecting to claim victory at this point. But "unluckily" West discarded a heart.

Rather irritated about the 4-1 diamond split, South cashed the top three spades, and conceded be demanded. Ingram patiently explained that there was no hurry to play diamonds. That crucial suit should have been left to the end, as in many similar situations. By taking all the major suit winners first. South would have discovered that West had begun with 10 cards in the major suits, and therefore only three in the minors.

Foresceing that he might need an entry back to the dummy, South should have cashed the king and ace of clubs, leaving the queen temporarily. It would now be clear that West had started with at most one diamond, so the play of the diamond ace followed by the 10 for a finesse would guarantee success; The club queen would be used as a re-entry for the diamonds after the king wins the tenth trick.

"It wasn't bad, luck, it was bad play," said Ingram. fact, you were locky to get to be dealt such an easy slam. I never get them." grand

THE ROOTS OF COINCIDENCE

By Arthur Koestler, Random House, 158 pp. $5.95.

standing of parapsychology, Arthur Koestler makes a curious point. Picking up a thread of the argument of his previous book, "The Case of the Midwife Toad in which he reviewed sympathetically the life of Dr. Paul Kammerer, the brilliant but ill-fated Austrian biologist who was perhaps the last respected adherent to the Lamarckian theory that acquired physical characteristics can be passed on genetically—Koestler questions once again the "prevailing dogma" of the neo-Darwinists, who insist that genes cannot be educated by experience. Koestler's brief argument runs roughly as follows: the fact that human infants are born with thick skin on the soles of their feet casts at least a ray of doubt on neo-Darwinism; the rays of doubt that once fell upon Newton's view of the universe have exploded into the light of modern quantum physics; modern quantum physics lends a certain plausibility to paranormal psychological phenomena; therefore the Inheritance of Acquired Characteristics ought perhaps to be given the same credence that now surrounds parapsychology. In short, if ESP is possible then why not IAC?.... Now I'll have to admit at once that it is not quite cricket to begin a review of "The Roots of Coincidence" by focusing on this relatively minor but nevertheless peculiar point, (peculiar if only because the thick skin on haby's feet scarcely seems powerful evidence to refute neo-Darwinian genetics). After all, "The Roots of Coincidence" is not a defense of Temerck; nor is it even concerned with heredity.

What Koestler's book is in fact shout—if I may postpone making my point for a moment-is the rigorous scientific work that has been going on during the last few decades in parapsychology; the experiments of such people, as Drs. J. B. and Louise Phine and Hellmut Schmidt at the Duke University Institute for Parapsychology, which have demonstrated beyond a statistical doubt that not only do people com-municate telepathically with one another, but also that people can discern extrasensorily the properties of inanimate objects; and, even more disturbing to our com-mon-sense picture of reality, that the human mind can exert in-fluence on insumate objects the phenomenon called psychokinesis; or PK, as distanct from extra-sensory perception, or ESP? Koestler's main contern is with demonstrating that contrary to what one might expect namely that such paranormal events are most disturbing because they seem to break what most of us think are the laws of the real world—it is precisely modern physics that offers a "rapprochement" between the real world and parapsychology. Even if the rapprochement is "negative in the sense that the unthinkable phenomena of ESP appear somewhat less preposterous in the light of unthinkable propositions of

Rhodesia has been in the Olympic village for almost a week. Yesterday, its track stars, none with medal chances, were sent to a meet at Kempten, some 66 miles from Munich. With the arrival of the Rhodesians came the departure of the blacks as athletes from the United States, Africa, the West Indies and Venezuela boycotted the meet. Several white Americans also left in

John Smith of the U.S. team, also a quarter-miler and the world record-holder in the 440, said he told McKinley at Kemp-ten. "I'm with you brother," when told the Rhodesians were competing and the Jamaicans weren't. There is one week temaining to resolve the Rhodesian issue, though the IOC has repeatedly said it would not change its stand. The opening ceremonies are next Saturday in the main stadium and the competition starts Sun-day. Track and field starts Aug. 31, but before then there will be snother warm-up meet. It is scheduled to take place at the massive 45,000-seat, 35,000 standing room main stadium, where many coaches hope their athletes will become acquainted—and not awed-by its size. But if the IOC has made no new stand by Wednesday, the same thing that happened et Kempten will hap-

Unity Cited Earlier this week, several black track stars issued a statement saying that they were in "unity with our African brothers."

It led to the meetings of the last two days which included the participation and concern of U.S. officials, something which did not happen before the 1968 Games, when John Carlos and Tommie Smith gave the black power salute on the victory podium.

The coach said today, "Clifford Buck called the meeting to give the kids a chance to express themselves. We hope that the IOC will study the draft. It is not a threat," and, according to one team member, does not offer any ultimatum.

The coach said, "We hope by going through the proper channels, we can reverse the IOC decision. But we're not even sure if we can get this statement into their hands."

Dewey's Moustache

By Russell Baker

WASHINGTON.—Thomas E. coming barbecuing of the Demo-Dewey had a moustache, cratic party. Dewey must haunt Afterward, that was one of the him. Despite all evidence, he thousand explanations you heard must go ahead clinging to the for Dewey's unaccountable failure Insistence that he is in a close fight for survival.

teches, sideburns, long locks—tended to be the kind of men America respected. Clark Gable, after all, had a moustache.

Nobody had attacked Dewey's moustache during the campaign, so it really made no sense, looking back at the election returns, to bring the moustache into the post-mortem analyses. But then, neither did many of the other factors make sense which were offered as possible explanations for the event.

Dewey's defeat was a happenplicability that men were willing to grasp at eny rationalization rather than believe what primitive instluct told them for a certainty, to wit, that somebody playing with pins, chicken feathers, bat's blood and a Thomas E. Dewey doll had tampered with the course of American history.

Dewey was simply unbeatable in 1948, and the politicians and reporters who saw, saw with their own eyes, what happened to him these men will never be quite whole again.

Among them, of course, was Richard M. Nixon, who is now, as Dewey was in 1948, simply unbeatable, only more so, Every poll shows him beating Sen. Mc-Govern so dreadfully that, if politics were a less brutal sport, like boxing, the match would be stopped immediately.

The memory of Dewey, which has eaten into the soul of the Republican party, prevents the prespect of easy victory from bringing joy, as It did in 1964 to the Democrat, Johnson, who was secure and delighted in the evidence which assured him that his victory would rival Alex-

No sensible man spends long at politics without learning to fear the childish passion of the gods for cruel jokes. Johnson, hirow w like a colossus in 1964, couldn't get into the Democratic National Convention in 1968. And Dewey -raised so high-just as his in Florida seems unreal next grasp was about to close upon week, it may be because the party grasp was about to close upon prize-the most hideous laughter . . .

Nixon, who has spent a long time at politics and has been the butt of a couple of Olympian to strut and bray about the gaining on it.

It would surely gall any man less fond of playing the under-dog. The love of the crowd lapping over him is what the poli-tician lives for, the sure sense thet he is the chosen lavorite of the masses. That is the politi-cian's catnip. To be able to exult through a long campaign in the knowledge that his enemies are ineffectual, to go on royal procession through the land beaming the great, confident, heart-warming smile of assurance in victory -politics has no greater reward.

For a man of Nixon's political history, it might be doubly sweet. After the heartbreaking rejection of 1960, the awful twist of the knife in 1962, the equivocal nature of the comeback victory in 1968, how sweet it might be to turn campaign into a Roman triumph spanning the continent! How deadly dangerous! Dewey, though dead, still mocks Republicans raised too high.

Pretending that he is in a desperate fight will probably not be hard for Nixon. He has a talent for playing the underdog as has the Vice-President. Between them, they have the power to make widows and orphans weep for the sufferings, misunderstandings and abuse which are hesped upon the poor President, his struggling but honest Pentagon his long-suffering public-relations campaign, his . . . Anyone who states the obvious -that it looks like an easy victory for Nixon—will probably, from here on out, he denounced for conspiracy to Not Re-Elect the President. Good Republicans will cleuch jaws in insistence that the party cannot dare look beyond this fall's fearfully dangerous campaign, all the while agreeing behind locked doors, joyfully or mournfully as the case may be that the inevitable re-election of Agnew as Vice-President will inevitably make him the candidate

If the Republican convention will be more concerned about 1976 and 1948 than about 1972. It will be looking ahead to the post-Nixon succession to be established in 1976 and hesitating to look guifaws, quite naturally declines back for fear that 1948 may be

Words: Fighting the English Invasion...

حكذا من الاصل

By Grace R. Conant

HANOVER, N.H.—President Pompidon is worrying about the French language. He is said to have appointed 15 special committees to find French alternatives to English words.

His committees will have to face many

According to reports, the French Academy, not known for its cosmopolitanism, ruled some time ago that "management" can be included in a French vocabulary provided it is pronounced in the French manner. What about the pronunciation of "le weekend," "le grand rush," "le leadership"? (It is interesting to note that "leadership"—a word important to President Pompidou-is masculine in French, perhaps an example of lingering male chauvinism. For German writers, the noun, since it is abstract, becomes feminine.)

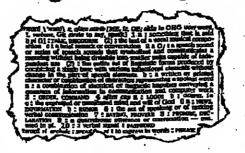

officially French by the spelling. (Their gender is not clear, but then one is not always clear about the gender of those who wear them.) "Le snacquebarre" ob-viously can easily be naturalized.

Pronunciation seems to an outsider to be perhaps the most debatable aspect of the course indicated by the French Academy. Can all imported words be made French by pronouncing them in the French manner? For instance, "interview." (The Germans have a verb, "interviewen," and heaven knows how that should be pro-

'Splashdown'

European papers have recently made considerable use of the splendidly dramatic word "splashdown"-difficult to equal in its chomatopoetic effect. How can the French Academy replace that or cope with its pronunciation? To make a "breakthrough" may also be complicated in any language but ours.

"Le sport" is practiced quite generally, but, as far as we know, one can only achieve "second wind" in English, and the hlessed word "teamwork" can hardly be adequately translated. "Fair play" is as British as cricket, and "common sense" can be explained only laboriously in European languages. "Privacy," also, is a word that only the British really understand. Certainly many Americans don't. And that lovely expression "horseplay"—maybe Con-tinentals have outgrown it.

Journalists all over Europe must seem to Mr. Pompidou the worst offenders. But they have to cover everything new. Comebacks, countdowns, conglomerates, driveins, shopping centers, snob appeal. Not to mention jazz (how does one pronounce that correctly in French or German or Italian?) Dixieland, funky and bop: can these be translated? Perhaps the experts know. Or perhaps these will have to be relegated to the group of technical ("scientific and economic") terms which, as the secretary of Mr. Pompidou's commissions is said to admit, cannot be rendered in

Nazi Try

We remember that the Nazis were not altogether successful in their clumsy attempts to eliminate foreign words from the German vocabulary. Goehbels must be turning over in his grave nowadays, if any echoes of present-day German journalism have reached him.

One reads that German executives sometimes suffer from the "Managerkrankheit" perhaps after they have "geluncht." They often work for a "Holdinggesellschaft," and must therefore be members of "das Establishment." Their airplanes must be "aufgetankt," and "Stewardesses" and "Purserettes" travel on them, as on competing airlines. In Germany, "das way of life" now includes "builders, best-sellers and selfmade men." The "Zeitgeist" seems to be adapting to an apparently irresistible process of Americanization.

This was strikingly demonstrated by the recent cabinet crisis in Germany which apparently had something to do with currency problems mysterious decisions, according to the journalists, about das Floating or der schmutzige Float.
Professor Schüler (der Superminister)

resigned after what one of his colleagues is said to have called a "clash." Mein walkout war richtig!" he reportedly exclaimed. It is evident that political careers rise and fall nowadays with the aid of imnorted iargon.

One must not sound provincial. There are many noble foreign words that we cannot match: for instance, Weltschmerz, Gcist, Angst (now widely adopted in this alienated age). We cannot appreciate the special significance of "esprit" to President Pompidou's countrymen. We must borrow from the Germans to express our malice: Schadenfreude has no equivalent. And there are international words that we take for granted. The French invented the "coup"—and also the "menu." We can boast at least that "le beamess" is wellknown everywhere. And "okay" was learned by every Japanese child years ago— President Pompidou's commissions can hardly abolish that. Perhaps the appropriate symbol for our efforts to com-municate in "one world" is the new type of "blugines." These, I understand, are provided with huttonboles making it possible to wear with them the decorated braces which we associate with Switzerland -a simple uniform, politically neutral, and let us hope, prophetic of cheerful possibilities for future understanding and recon-

By Israel Shenker

NEW YORK (NYT). - Those who speak of looking up a word in THE dictionary will not be heartened by news that a publishing company is about to produce 6,000 different dictionaries. Having decided to take the lexical world for its province, Books For Libraries in Preeport, L.L., academic reprinters, scoured the secondhand book market for copies of the out-of-print works it wants to reprint. It spent $750 for the six volumes of Robert Morrison's "Dictionary of the Chinese Language," and 45 cents for a copy of D.N. Ushakov's "Orfograficheskii slovar" (Orthographic dictionary).

All of the dictionaries will emerge in microfiche-96 or 98 pages miniaturized into a 4-by-6-inch plastle card, for reading means of a machine. One-tenth of the list will also be in hardcover. Thanks to the prospect, scholars will find it difficult to let a word stump them, however archaic or remote.

First Available

Steven E. Hegaard, the editor in charge, is a Turkic scholar, as his Danish name would never indicate, and therefore, Turkish dictionaries will be the first available.

What a culture of scholars has trail-blazed the forest of Altaic-Turkic, Mongolian, Manchu-Tungusic and Korean; Russia's Nikolai Ivanovich Ashmarin (1870-1933), for example, took on Chuvash, and turned out a Chuvash-Russian dictionary in 17 volumes. Indiana University took on Ashmarin and began reprinting his work, only to run out of money after four BPL plans to see Ashmarin through, beginning to end.

Nikolal Alexandrovich Baskakov (born 1905) took Karakalpak (a dialect of Kazakh) for his very own and produced the definitive work. At Columbia University Mr. Hegaard found another Karakalpak expert in his own teacher, Karl Heinrich Menges, who was earlier a fellow student of the best-known Turkic expert, Gunnar tions mediator in the Middle East and Sweden's ambassador to Russia, In his youth, Dr. Jarring wrote about East Turki and
